Electrical Industry Free Webinars Now Available On Demand

Irving, TX: For several years, Shermco Industries has offered free webinars on a wide variety of electrical industry topics. These webinars can provide valuable information on electrical safety and maintenance for those in engineering, maintenance and HSE. All of these webinars are now available on demand from Shermco's website www.shermco.com/events. There is no charge for these outstanding and topical webinars, presented by industry experts with decades of experience in electrical system and machinery testing, service, engineering and safety training. Many of these presentations were originally developed to help train Shermco's technicians, but have been updated and expanded for interest to both management and maintenance professionals.

Topics include rotating machine reliability and lubrication, protection and control relays, medium voltage cable testing, NFPA 70E and OSHA 1910.269 safety standards, circuit breaker maintenance, insulating oil analysis, advanced system metering and emergency power for hospitals.

Each webinar runs approximately one hour and the Shermco team members can be contacted if there are any questions on the topics that weren't answered during the presentation. Additionally, certificates of attendance are also available, if needed. This is an on-going project for Shermco Industries with 4-6 webinars planned per year.
